Nestled in the heart of St. Louis, Missouri, the Maupin House stands as a testament to the city's rich architectural heritage. Built in 1871, this grand Victorian mansion has been meticulously preserved and is now open to the public as a museum. Step inside and discover the fascinating story of the Maupin family and their impact on St. Louis history.

Architectural Significance

The Maupin House is a stunning example of the Second Empire architectural style. This style was popular in the United States during the mid-19th century and is characterized by its mansard roof, arched windows, and elaborate ornamentation. The Maupin House is a particularly fine example of this style, with its intricate gingerbread detailing and its sweeping front porch.

The house was designed by architect Alexander Gunn, who was one of the leading architects in St. Louis at the time. Gunn also designed many other notable buildings in the city, including the St. Louis Public Library and the Old Courthouse.

The Maupin Family

The Maupin House was built for George W. Maupin, a wealthy businessman and civic leader. Maupin made his fortune in the dry goods business and was active in a variety of civic organizations. He served as a member of the St. Louis Board of Aldermen and was a founder of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce.

Maupin and his family lived in the house for over 50 years. During that time, they hosted many lavish parties and social events. The Maupin House was also a popular destination for tourists and visitors to St. Louis.

The Maupin House Today

The Maupin House is now owned by the Missouri Historical Society and is open to the public as a museum. The museum offers tours of the house and its grounds and also hosts a variety of special events and exhibitions.

The Maupin House is a popular destination for tourists and local residents alike. It is a beautiful example of Victorian architecture and a reminder of the city's rich history.

Things to See and Do at the Maupin House

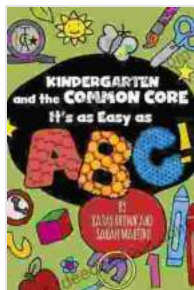

There are many things to see and do at the Maupin House, including:

- * Take a guided tour of the house and its grounds.
- * Visit the museum's exhibits on the history of the Maupin family and the house.
- * Attend a special event or exhibition.
