Fingerings and Voicings

There are many different ways to finger and voice mandolin chords. The most common fingerings are shown in the diagrams below.

The voicing of a chord refers to the order in which the notes are played. The most common voicing for a mandolin chord is root-third-fifth. For example, the G major chord is voiced as G-B-D.

Techniques

There are a few basic techniques that can be used to play mandolin chords. These techniques include:

- Hammer-ons
- Pull-offs
- Slides
- Vibrato

Hammer-ons and pull-offs are techniques that involve striking a string with a pick and then quickly fretting another string with the same finger. Slides involve sliding a finger up or down the neck of the mandolin. Vibrato involves rapidly moving a finger back and forth on a fretted string.
