

Memoirs of Miria Matembe: An Insider's Account of the Museveni Government

Miria Matembe is a Ugandan politician who served as Minister of Ethics and Integrity in the government of President Yoweri Museveni from 2006 to 2016. In her new book, Memoirs of Miria Matembe, she offers a first-hand account of her experiences in government, providing insights into the political landscape of Uganda and the challenges facing the country.

Born in 1955, Matembe grew up in a rural village in eastern Uganda. She attended Makerere University, where she studied law. After graduating, she worked as a lawyer and human rights activist. In 2006, she was appointed Minister of Ethics and Integrity by President Museveni.

As Minister of Ethics and Integrity, Matembe was responsible for promoting ethical conduct in government and fighting corruption. She also played a key role in the development of Uganda's anti-corruption laws. However, her efforts were often met with resistance from within the government, and she was ultimately frustrated in her attempts to bring about meaningful change.
